

Formulation and Evaluation of antibacterial Herbal Gel of Murraya Koenigii Leaves Extract

Yogesh Vilas Chaudhari, Prof. M. V. Vanve, Dr. Surwase K. P.

Aditya Institute of Pharmaceutical College, Beed

Abstract: Herbal medicines were utilized in conventional clinical practices for centuries. The improvement of biological remedial medication inside the frame of proof-based therapeutic medication is relatively unique. Herbal medicines have won increasing popularity within the last decade, and at the moment are used by approximately 20% of the community. Curry Leaves (Murraya koenigii) is a leafy, raw leaves limited to India.

Curry leaves are herbal seasoning agents various good health benefits. They comprise various medicinal properties that comprise it existing anti-diabetic, antioxidant, antimicrobial, anti-inflammatory, anti-carcinogenic and with hepato-protective action. The recent study has existed begun with the goal to develop and distinguish antibacterial herbal gel of Murraya koenigii leaves extract.

Keywords: Herbal medicine

